WASHINGTON, December 4.

CONGRESS.

The Congressional session to-day was brief and of no especial interest. The Senate remained in session about three-quarters of an hour, and the House about an hour and a half. The attendance in both bodies was small, and not over four dozen members being in the Capitol.

BILL TO RESTRICT THE PRESIDENT'S PARDONING POWER.

The noticeable feature in the upper branch was the immediate action on the Ehot bill, taking away the President's power of pardon in general cases, as refused. The motion to take it up was lost by one majority. It will doubtless be taken up to-morrow, and Messrs. Sumner and Howe seemed to be so accurately counted through without reasonable confidence.

PRESIDENT ACTION OF THE HOUSE.

The House was not quite so prompt in its opinion relative to the present political situation in three votes. It took time to use, on this occasion; first, a resolution expressive of the John Quincy Adams doctrine of Non-Intervention; second, in directing Timothy Pickering's letter to Monroe's instructions, under the expectancy of repealing a bill for government of the South; third, to reaffirm the Constitutional Amendment, its ballot in the Constitutional Amendment as a liberal basis of settlement.

STUART.

For the fifth instance now over, Governor Stuart's nomination has had declared in caucus to-day are, viz: that the Senate will not confirm the Government know as long ago as the Senate adjourned. Mr. Stuart was at the head of the Papal army by the very secretary, and the latter said that he had appointed him because he was a Catholic. Mr. Stuart's friends have called on their friends to be ready to make the opposition of the fact.

APPOINTMENTS.

Senate closed met again this morning. Governor Stuart's name was not invited. A number of favorable reports were made from the various Executive Committees of the Senate. They will probably be able to report favorably. Some will doubtless be made from the Committee of that on the Post Office Department. Postmaster-General Randall has been removed in that connection Pitcairn, Pennsylvania, and Mr. Randall, of Adams, Pennsylvania, will be named as belonging to the Post Office Department. The caucus will probably to-day.

CABINET MEETING.

The new French Minister, is expected to-day, and Senor Montholon leaves for Paris, Mexico, to-morrow.

THE CONFEDERATE PENSION.

The Senate has taken no action on the two pension bills, both of which are now in the hands of the Committee on Pensions.

THE CONFEDERATE DEBTS.

The Committee on Finance has not yet had under consideration the question of the payment of the Confederate debts.

SECESSION.

The smuggling fraternity is also found favorable with Southern feeling. Reports on the Southern coast, are devoting themselves with considerable energy to the work of smuggling, to the pursuit of their business in that quarter.

THE CONFEDERATE STATE PENSION.

Up to the present time a large number of applications for pensions, both of Confederate officers and participants in the late rebellion, continue to be received at the Pension Bureau. Of course, very few of the latter are granted of late.

THE CONFEDERATE DEBT.

The following is a condensed statement of the Confederate debt, as made up from the books of the Treasury during the month of November, 1866:

Three Navy Agent's accounts settled, amounting to $5,456,647; two ditto ditto ditto

THE NEW YORK PRESS GANG.

The New York Associated Press consists of six newspapers published in the city of New York—viz: the Herald, Tribune, Times, World, Sun, and Journal of Commerce. Until yesterday the World constituted a part of the Association, but, having ventured to assert its independence by publishing certain dispatches that did not pass through the channel established by the "Ring," its connection has been declared at an end. The Association was formed, in the first instance, upon the principle of less than that number of papers were necessary to all newspapers, and which all are bound to have, such as proceedings of Congress, exclusive and important dispatches of foreign intelligence, important political conventions, etc., and that it is more economical to obtain such news in this way, by far, than for each journal to procure it separately. The idea was still further carried out, by rendering the news thus obtained to journals of other cities upon the same terms and conditions, thus reducing the cost of telegraphic news to such newspaper, or to whatever precise period in the history of the New York Associated Press the rule was established prohibiting any newspaper, not publishing any news received by telegraph, without first tendering it to all other newspapers in the Association, the record knows no restrictions until a vote was adopted, 8 to 5, sequently no exception was made in favor

Any one property it pleases, but it procured [illegible] publish it. Once it was [illegible] by telegraph, it must be delivered to all other members, duly, of course, sharing the expense. This rule applied to all journals, which were actual members of the Association, and to all journals in other cities receiving the news. The result was that no journal could belong to the press but by any motive for enterprise. It could not enjoy the fruits of its own labor, or the results of its own genius, unless it obtained its news by actual telegraph, or some other authorized channel of transmission. The rule, it is true, was not enforced upon the journals of the Northwest, probably because the distance from New York was so great that they were not really competitors of the six or seven journals in the metropolis. Nevertheless, it was liable to be enforced at any time. This naturally accounts for the fact, so often published, that the Chicago papers are superior to the New York papers. Competition being free at this point, while it was forbidden there, the rare sense of Western papers has been lively, and the public have got the benefit of it.

Latterly, however, the New York Herald has been endeavoring to gain an advantage by piling up the cost of dispatches so high that the other members of the Association in New York could not take them. It would not do for the Herald to withdraw from the Association, for then the other papers would combine against it. But by offering a sufficient sum for additional or political speeches from Europe by the Atlantic cable, and tendering them under the rules to the other members of the Association it would either accept their response or obtain the privilege of publishing its own matter exclusively. Occasionally, when an item of real value would come to the Herald, it would be held back for exclusive publication, gone to press, and then sent it around to them—the Herald pretending to have received the late item by express or delivered in the usual way. As the Herald was strong financially, the other papers did not dare to expel it from the Ring. The Times has been playing the same game as the Herald, though in a feebler way. Both papers desire the ring to be kept up, because it is, or rather was, practically impossible to start a new daily paper in New York, unless it could procure itself admitted to the Association; and all the monopolists, however they might hate each other, were agreed that no new paper should be admitted. They would admit new papers as a participation in the despatches in other cities, but in New York they held a firm grip, and compelled the public to take their papers or none.

We have been thus particular in stating the condition of things in New York, as it has an important bearing on the recent action of the Western Associated Press. A few days since the Ring quarreled with their old agent, Mr. D. H. Craig. What were the merits of the case in the quarrel we have not taken pains to investigate, nor is it necessary, for the purposes of this article, to inquire. Mr. Craig started a new agency, the object and purpose of which was to get news, and to sell the same freely to all journals desiring to take it. It was evident to the Committee of the Western Associated Press, who recently visited New York, that Mr. Craig's arrangements for getting news were far superior to those of the choke-dog Association from which he had so recently parted. There was all the difference between him and his competitors, that there is between one man who understands his business and six men who do not.

On the 19th of November a meeting of the Western Associated Press was held at Cincinnati to consider what action should be taken in view of the imbroglio at New York. A disposition was manifested to maintain relations of amity between the Western Association and that of New York, if the same could be done on a footing of equality. Accordingly the following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That the Western Associated Press will furnish to the New York Associated Press, at all points to be agreed upon, all news and matter of collective general interest to be telegraphed to the west of the county from the six or seven New York, in exchange for the news collected from the east and south.

2. That the Western Associated Press will make their dispatches to the New York Associated Press, upon all miscellaneous news from the West.

3. That the news by the Atlantic cable or from the Pacific coast shall be subject to special arrangement.

4. That the Western Associated Press shall arrange with the New York Associated Press to furnish the news of the New York Associated Press [illegible] to be agreed upon.

5. That the New York Associated Press shall furnish the news of the Western Associated Press, [illegible] to be agreed upon.

6. That the Executive Committee be empowered to add to their number if they deem it necessary.

In the event that these resolutions were not agreed to by the New York Associated Press, the Committee were empowered to make such other arrangements as they should deem advisable.

The Executive Committee, consisting of Mr. Halstead, of the Cincinnati Commercial, and Mr. Brigham, of the Pittsburgh Commercial, added to their number Mr. White, of the Chicago TRIBUNE, in pursuance of the last resolution. Mr. White, it is said, however, was prevented from going to New York, and therefore from serving on the Committee.

The Committee proceeded to New York and presented to the Executive Committee of the New York Associated Press the wishes of the Western Association as above described. The proposition subjected in the last resolution was immediately negatived. It was afterwards referred to the full ring, when it was again negatived. The reason at first assigned for rejecting it was that the expense of collecting news in the East and Canada was much greater than the expense of collecting it from the West and Southwest. A committee composed of the Committee of the Western Association that at second of the express on either side should be kept secret, and the party from whom it should be had. This also was negatived and no reason assigned. All the other resolutions looking to any sort of independence on the part of the Western press, or any control over their own affairs in the matter of telegraph news, were declined by the ring. Their monopoly was not to be broken in any particular.

The Committee of the Western Association deemed it advisable to make one more effort for harmony and independence. They accordingly proposed to the ring to take all their news and pay for it, and also to take such other news as they could get from any source whatever. The ring immediately replied that any journal taking news from any other organization or organizations would not be allowed to take their news. The Committee and Executive Board then announced their intention to go home [illegible] their own business, and made a contract with Mr. Craig, the chief points of which have been already published.

The suppression of the New York ring is only one blow by their lack of information. They cannot conceive it possible that any [illegible] or any class of newspapers should be able to survive the loss of the little dribble they receive, which was filtered through their sieve, when in point of fact the Chicago TRIBUNE and Times, the Cincinnati Gazette and Commercial, the Pittsburgh Gazette and Dispatch, and the St. Louis Republican and Democrat, and many nothing to the journals of Louisville, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Toledo, Milwaukee, and other Western cities, expend large sums for telegraphing, which will make more money every year than the New York Associated Press. So impressed are the journalists of the New York Herald and Tribune, with the idea that there is nothing of any consequence in journalism outside of New York, that they have hit upon the project of breaking down the Western Associated Press, and restoring their old monopoly, by giving their news away to two or three starveling newspapers in the West, and paying the telegraph tolls besides. This is such a brilliant thought that it ought to be telegraphed at once by the Russian Extension Line to Siberia. It would arouse the nations.

It is proposed to hold a meeting of the Western Associated Press in this city, to formally ratify the action of the Executive Committee, as it has been already ratified by nineteen-twentieths of the journals of which it is composed), some time during the present month. We trust that there will be a full attendance. If the publishers of any Western journal wish to put their business under the control of an irresponsible ring, in New York city, with the certainty that in a few months, or years, they will be left in the lurch, we can only express our sympathy for their creditors.

REDUCTION OF TAXES.

Secretary McCulloch's Report contains three cents' ideas around which all the others revolve, viz.: Contraction of our redundant currency, payment of the National debt and reduction of Federal taxation. On the necessity of contraction to the amount of —every sound and judicious mind will endorse in the main, the recommendations and arguments of the Secretary. Many men may not approve the policy of paying off the whole of the National debt, by the same generation which contracted it; but prefer to let at least half of it go over to the next generation, but will doubtless see more benefit from a preserved Union than this generation whose valor and sacrifices saved it, because the next will be a larger, richer, more wealthy, and possess larger interests to be benefited by a staple Government, based on equal rights and established upon the principles of Justice and Liberty. The next generation has not done much for the present one, and has not done during this [illegible] years from now [illegible] be eighty millions of inhabitants in the United States where there are but thirty-five millions now; and the taxable wealth of that period will certainly be four times as great as the present. Once a debt is contracted, it must be delivered to all generations, duly, of course, sharing the expense. The debt now owed by England, which [illegible] and entering are or more [illegible] of Commerce, in the city, and the Tribune can [illegible] for its mails and sale at our [illegible] but by newsmen.

Receipts for the fiscal year ending July 1, 1867:

From customs, in gold	$170,045,000
From public lands	1,000,000
From direct tax	1,574,734
From internal revenue	309,226,600
Miscellaneous sources	30,118,900
Total	$559,965,199

The expenditures of the Government since the suppression of the rebellion, for the ordinary peace footing, including the increase of pensions and extra bounties to be paid by next July, amount in round numbers to $290,000,000, leaving a surplus of the enormous amount of $268,000,000. That this sum is not exaggerated is shown by the fact that the debt is being reduced at the rate of twenty odd millions per month, and that from November 1, 1865, to November 1, 1866, the national debt was diminished by more than two hundred millions, notwithstanding sixty to seventy millions were applied, during that period, in paying off discharged soldiers, and sailors, and claims of army contractors and quartermasters.

Mr. McCulloch estimates the receipts and expenditures for the next fiscal year, running from July 1, 1867, to July 1, 1868, as follows:

From customs	$160,000,000
From internal revenue	265,000,000
From lands	1,000,000
From miscellaneous sources	25,000,000
	$450,000,000

The expenditures are estimated as follows:

For the civil service	$23,357,793
For pensions and Indians	2,500,000
For the War Department, including fortifications, rivers and harbors	110,91,661
For the Navy Department	31,000,000
For interest on the public debt	143,000,000
	310,349,454
Leaving a surplus of estimated receipts over estimated expenditures	139,650,546

From this estimate the Secretary estimates shows a surplus of eighty-six millions. Now [illegible] people are prepared to believe that the present rate of taxation will yield $130,000,000 less revenue in 1867-8 than in its fiscal year 1865-6. The thing is absurd on its face. True, there was a small shade of reduction in the revenue from lands and customs during the fiscal year 1865-6. But the session of Congress, but the reduction was more than made up by the increase of the tariff, by the abrogation of the Reciprocity treaty with the British North American Colonies, by the higher tax on cotton, the improved regulations in regard to valuation of foreign goods, and by the stringent new law respecting the collection of the excise on whiskey and beer.

It is perfectly safe to estimate the revenue of the coming fiscal year at $400,000,000, and excepting Mr. McCulloch's estimate of expenditure, we have a surplus remaining of $150,000,000. There is no doubt that Mr. McCulloch himself privately anticipates a larger surplus than that, but in his anxiety to be on the safe side he purposely underestimates the receipts and exaggerates the expenditures.

The conclusion we arrive at, after a careful survey of the whole field, is that Congress can easily reduce Federal taxation by one hundred and twenty-five millions of dollars, and that one hundred millions is the very least amount of reduction that should be effected. The reduction should take effect at the earliest possible day—not later than the first of next March.

The financial effect of a reduction of one hundred millions of taxes to the industry of the country would be incalculable. Suppose, for instance, that the income tax was reduced one half—viz.: that the ten per cent rates were made five, and the five per cent made three, and the exemptions raised to $1,500—what a relief it would afford to hundreds of thousands of tax-payers. And next suppose that the whole schedule of taxes on manufacturing (except the excises on liquors and tobacco, which are deleterious luxuries of appetite), were wiped out, contemplate the marvellous stimulus it would give to productive industry, and how it would cheapen things and increase the consumption thereof, thereby giving greater employment to labor at more remunerative prices. Such a policy, we say, that the import duties on raw materials entering into American manufactures, were removed, what an additional impetus it would give to production and consumption! Now all these [illegible] of taxation can be made without reducing the present revenue one hundred millions a year. The increase of revenue in the six last sessions, caused by the improvement in the public prosperity, would make a fifty millions reduction of the anticipated loss, thereby enabling Congress at subsequent sessions to repeal or reduce taxes on other things. Let the people of all Congress to forthwith unload from their backs one hundred millions of oppressive excises on production and income.

The Society of the Alumni of the Virginia Military Institute, has inaugurated a movement to erect a memorial in honor of the rebel General Stonewall Jackson. It is proposed to erect at the Institute a memorial chapel, and in the centre of it to place a statue of the "great Christian hero," as he is described in the plan of the committee. In the same chapel will be placed mural tablets of marble, bearing the names of the pupils who were killed in the secession army.

We have received from the publishers a copy of the work by Judge Jameson, of Chicago, just issued, entitled "The Constitutional Convention; its History, Powers, and Modes of Proceeding." The subject, which is one of great, and in many respects of surpassing interest, has never before, we believe, been treated in an independent work. We propose, after an examination of the book, to refer to it more at length. It is published by Charles Scribner & Co., New York, and is for sale by S. C. Griggs & Co., Chicago.

President Johnson made a journey, the other day, upon what might be called a public occasion, and, strange to say, made no speech. The ceremony of laying the corner-stone of the Astor Library, in New York, was honored by his presence, and he participated in it without any show or display of oratory.

NAVY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, Dec. 3, 1866.

SIR: I have the honor to present the annual report of the condition and operations of the Department and of the Navy during the year. The statistics of the naval force in commission and establishment and an enumeration of the squadrons employed, with the location and cruising limits of the vessels and such other information as the condition was deemed necessary and convenient for the information of the public, will be found in the accompanying reports from the several bureaus of the Department in the administration of naval affairs.

When the war terminated, which had developed the principle and importance of steam as the chief element in the activity and inventive powers of our countrymen, it was the duty and the policy of efficiency in the navy, the Department became to adapt to the new forms and the new modes of warfare which the progress of the age had rendered indispensable. Under the pressure of the necessities of the war, the Department had been compelled to purchase and convert into vessels of war a large number of steamers, which, during the war, had assumed a magnificent proportion of the commercial marine of the country, while the existing navy then established but few steamers of any considerable size. It was, therefore, necessary, in order to maintain the naval supremacy of the country, that the Department should improve the opportunity which then existed to procure from the best sources of private enterprise the most effective vessels, and to place the country in the front rank of naval powers. The Department was fortunate in securing the services of many of the most skilful officers of the navy, who had been trained in the school of experience during the war, and who, by their knowledge of the wants of the service, were enabled to direct the construction of vessels adapted to the necessities of the country. Under the direction of these officers, and with the assistance of the most skilful engineers, the vessels composing the present navy have been built.

In the construction of ships-of-war from many years' experience and observation, we have learned that such are the resources of timber in this country for the construction of the wooden vessels of the navy that we cannot build a larger portion of our navy.

For the construction of iron vessels of war, it can safely be asserted that, although our country has not the materials in quantity and quality so well adapted to that class of vessels, yet we possess many advantages in that regard, we are satisfied that we can build iron vessels of war as cheaply as any other country, and that we have the means within the limits of the United States to construct vessels for the most extensive naval operations of war. BEEF CATTLE.—The day was a charming one for cattle operations, and buyers were out in force to commence duty, yet notwithstanding these favoring circumstances, the market opened very dull, with no disposition on the part of packers to make purchases except at a great reduction from the prices that ruled here on days that duplicated. There was an enquiry for cattle for shipping purposes, but the demand was confined to the most of a class of steers that were not wanted by the packers here at any price, and especially at the prices now ruling. Common and inferior stock were in large supply, and the market was overstocked with this class of cattle. There were received 141 head cattle from Illinois Central Railroad, consigned to Hall & Co.; 200 head from Chicago & Alton, consigned to Hall & Co.; 200 head from Chicago & Rock Island, consigned to Hall & Co.; 200 head from Michigan Southern, consigned to Hall & Co.; 200 head from Chicago & Northwestern, consigned to Hall & Co.; 200 head from Chicago & Milwaukee

It is a thing which the world would not give up for a million pounds sterling, and which, even at that price, would not be bought. Dickens' new story, "Mugby Junction," is just now issued by Ticknor & Fields, and for sale by A. Hall & Co., 24 Lake street. In half-bound or paper cover it is published at a low price, and is a perfect Christmas story. Any Dickens-ite or Christmas Carol-ite will purchase this new volume.

AMUSEMENTS.

HOFFMAN'S TRANCHA.—Mr. George L. Aiken's version of Griffith Gaunt was received last night in a good house. Without entering into an examination of Mr. Aiken's new version, or of the merits of Mr. Aiken's new compliments with the rival of the piece, which we may do at a more convenient season, we will say that the play was well put on the stage, and distinguished by its faithful adherence to the thrilling incidents of the novel. Miss Cushman's personation of Kate Peyton was a most powerful piece of acting, and elicited the warmest applause. The audience was large and fashionable, and the performance was received with the most unbounded favor. Mr. Aiken's version is decidedly the best of the many that have been published, and we trust that the play will be sufficiently successful to induce the management to produce it frequently. Miss Cushman will appear this evening in Leah the Forsaken, and to-morrow evening in Griffith Gaunt.

LUCILLE WESTERN.—The most fashionable and appreciative audiences ever assembled, by any dramatic enactment, the artist proved to be the case last night.

And a Full and Efficient Company.

The Play of EAST LYNNE has everywhere achieved a brilliant success, when presented by MISS WESTERN, and has been produced in the principal cities of the East.

NEARLY 1,000 TIMES,

To the most fashionable and appreciative audiences ever assembled, by any dramatic enactment, the artist proved, to be the case last night.

THE LARGEST AUDIENCE EVER CONGREGATED

By her incomparable impersonation of the character of

LADY ISABEL and MADAM VINE,

That she alone can make for her play its success it has achieved; while

TEARS AND SOBS,

And other signs of

EMOTIONAL SYMPATHY,

Evoked from overloving audiences, attest the

PURE MORALITY OF THE PLAY.

ITS WONDERFUL DOMESTIC PICTURES—ITS CORRECT DRAWINGS OF SOCIETY.

THE TORTURES OF JEALOUS HIRD—THE PERNICIOUS INFLUENCES OF CONJUGAL DISTRUST—THE MISERY OF A HAPPY HOME—THE MISERY OF SEPARATION,

THE STRENGTH OF MATERNAL TIES,

THE VACILLATIONS OF LOVE,

THE TERRORS OF DEATH,

As repeatedly presented by the impersonations of authoress, vividly portrayed by the impersonations of

HER DESPLT-WRONGED HUSBAND.

This Play has doubtless done more actual good to the community, where it has been presented, than any other which has ever been played in the country. Its moral tone is pure, and its lessons are such as can not fail they to come out of it improvements in the world. Miss Western's Lady Isabel is a most touching and beautiful picture, and the entire Western company are fully up to the Grand Local Combination.
